Science Caucus

TO: Members of the Student Representative Assembly
FROM: Jazzlyn Abbott
SUBJECT: Science Caucus - SRA 23N Report
DATE: January 29th, 2024

Precious SRA,

We hope you're having a supercalifragilisticexpialidocious week so far! Your favorite caucus made quite a bit of progress in the last 2 weeks (round of applause).

Atrium Event

Logistics are currently underway. Jazz and Parth met with Adam and Omer on Monday to go over the steps required to make this event happen. In case you forgot (smh), the Science caucus in collaboration with the Health Science caucus are planning to host an academic research symposium for undergraduate students enrolled in the Science and Health Sciences Caucus. This serves as an opportunity for students to find ongoing research that they can contribute to and offers presenters the opportunity to present their research that they have been working on so diligently. Additionally, thesis students can present their work to a large audience of students and get feedback on their presentations before they must defend their work. We are planning to host this event in CIBC hall.

More logistics-related items will be discussed in-person as the meeting with Adam and Omer has yet to happen.

Office Hours

The SRA science caucus met 2 times this week. In the first meeting, we went over hosting office hours in pairs based on the availability of the caucus throughout the week. Jazz and Parth are currently working towards finding a time that best suits everyone every week, such that we can book out a room for an hour every week on that day. Promotions will follow accordingly.

Social Media

The SRA science caucus, once again, blesses your Instagram feed with our beautiful faces and meeting recap slideshows. Soon, we will be collaborating with SRA healthsci, MURSA, and OUR to cross-promote the research symposium event, which should hopefully drive more attention towards our Instagram page.

Best,

Your Favourite Caucus
